Hi Folks,
All is well here on Long Island, spring has sprung! And so has the coin market! If you haven't paid attention the market has been moving strongly and every day I am asked is it too late, am I already paying too much? Well quite frankly I broke my crystal ball when I bounced it down the basement steps at age 3.5 ☹️. However, I can tell you some of what is going on now. We deal in Rare coins, key word Rare. Now for many years collector interest was often dormant after the peak of the Statehood Quarter Boom. But with the pandemic creating a lot of excess free time and governments loose monetary policy interest has picked up substantially. If you consider the word Rare as used above, older coins are rare. The average person does not have any. This does not include modern made for collector's mint issues, that is another roller coaster ride.

We are currently paying more for most common Morgan and Peace Dollars then we were selling them for 6 months ago. Carson City Morgan's are up over 40% since November. Silver eagles are up in premium 75%. Most silver and gold bullion related coins/bars are double the previously normal premium. Common Barber coinage in the lower grades is up 20%. Scarcer common date $20 gold that used to have a 5% premium now are closer to 20% if you can find them.

So, from my broken crystal ball. BU CC $ now $325 going to $400 this year. MS63 Morgan's now $60+ going to $75/80. 1921 Peace (anniversary issue) now $135 VG-F going to $200. Circulated Franklin's, Walkers and Barber Halves going from $10-$15 to $15-20. The only thing to stop this is a severe economic downturn. But can that happen with our government printing Billions of Dollars to fix the economy? Of course, our politicians fail to understand "don't fix it if it ain't broke"!

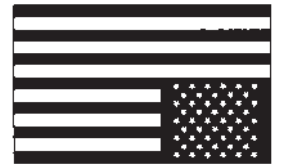

I am sorry to say Delia has left the company, she had an opportunity much closer to home and her children's daily needs.

Check out our website, we have reached 50% photo's. the guys in Tenn. Have added over 5000-coin images in the last 5 months!
